AUTHORITIES ALL AT SEA

Still No Satisfactory Solution of the Avers Mystery.

A Serious Blunder Appears to Have Been Made in Not Having Mrs. Bonine Testify at the Coroner's Inquest-Effect of Her Statement.

The police officials and Coroner Nevitt are just beginning to awaken to the fact that was perfectly evident to District Attorney Gould and others from the mothe nature of Mrs. Bonine's statement that the case has been badly handled, and that so far from clearing up the cirumstances attending the death of James than ever. The authorities are now convinced that had Mrs. Bonine been acting under the advice of one of the shrewdest lawyers in the country she could not have made a wiser move or placed herself in a better position than by acting as she did.

any connection with the tragedy, but when it became evident to her that she could not avoid being involved, she did what the officials believe has never been equaled in the history of crime. Mrs Bonine, they say, saw that each day was but adding to the accumulation of evi-dence, all of which pointed directly to her having some connection with the case. This evidence was summed up as far as could be done without interfering with the ends of justice, the morning of the day of Mrs. Bonine's confession, as it was called at the time. As the time approached when she was to be placed under oath and rigorously cross-examined before the jury, which was sitting in inquest over the remains of the dead man, she recognized that it would be impo for her to avoid being implicated in the case in some way, and she took one of the detectives aside, and poured into his ear a story of the crime that was looked upon at the time as a confession, but which it is now believed was an adroit

By this means she avoided the examina-tion, on the stand under oath and the embarrassing and trying ordeal which it in-volved. She placed in the hands of the Government a statement that will be used before the grand that will be used before the grand jury and that, as a mat-ter of fact will place before that body the defence of the accused. She will also be able to place before the trial jury her statement of the case without going on the stand and being subjected to the at-tacks of the prosecuting attorney or involving an examination as to any of her

EMBARRASSING TO THE GOVERNMENT. But by far the most important bearing that her action had on the case was the calling off of the detectives and others from the search for evidence and the abandonment of effort on their part and on the part of the Coroner. The Coroner's Office appears to have been satisfied that a person had been found who could be charged with the crime, or at least held though several important witnesses had not been examined. This resulted in a verdict by the jurors that was couched in tremely embarrassing to the Government.

Mrs. Bonine is in the peculiar position of being confined in the Disitrict jail without any charge standing against her. When placed under arrest by Detective Sergeant Horne and Lieutenant Moore and lodged at the House of Detention the charge of murder appeared against her name on the records of that institution For want of proper evidence before them the Coroner's jury avoided a direct accusation and simply alleged that Ayers came to his death in a struggle in which Mrs. Bonine was involved. Douglass & Douglass, who have been retained as counsel for Mrs. Bonine, have seized upon this weakness and propose, it is under-stood, to base their claim for a writ of habeas corpus upon it. Attorneys who the point is well taken and that there is an excellent chance for her to secure her War.

Gunn stated that he had not worked at the Kenmore since March, 1900, and that Mrs. Benine gave him the weapon in either January or February of that year. The pistol is now in possession of the detectives. Whatever Mrs. Bonine's con-nection with the case has been the police consider that she is one of the most re

She sees no one save members of her family and attorneys. She retired early last night. but her sleep was not so tranqill as it had been the first night after the had been taken to the jail. Scon after she arose this morning she partook of breakfast, which differed considerably from the usual prison fare, in that it included fruit. She appeared cheerful and read newspaper accounts of yesterday's de-No one called until after 11

Then it was that the prison physician made his rounds, and Mrs. Bonine was the first of the inmates of the jail called upon. She was apparently in good conness. The physician stated that the bruises on Mrs. Bonine's left leg were not serious, but that they were quite pronounced. There is no abrasion on the Hmb. The flesh is discolored, however, and black and blue marks extend from the knee along the shinbone and the caif to

While the physician was with Mrs. Bonine in the matron's room, Mr. Bo-nine called at the jail, and went at once to see his wife. aining to the teaching of her childre whose progress in their studies sho watched closely. About a year ago the supervising principal of the divison in which Mrs Bonine's children attended chool sent out a letter to parents of pu oils asking them to express their opinion regarding home study. Mrs. Benine made reply to these questions which shows remarkable insight into educational problems and illustrates the clear mentalty of the woman upon whom public attion has been centred for a week past The letter was obtained from an ac uaintance of Mrs. Bonine who knew of her interest in school matters. The three juestions asked are answered by Mrs. Boine. It is in regard to suggestions for home study that she outlines a plan which was evidently the result of considerable thought. The questions, together with Mrs. Benine's replies, follow:

"To Parents: Your opinion respecting ome study is earnestly requested. "1. Do you believe in home study? If

, of what kind? "I do. Review of the day's work. "2. How much time should be devoted to study each morning?" "One hour for eighth grade."

"3. Have you any suggestions to make especting home study, oral or written?"
"I would suggest that the home study nsists of questions soarranged that some ne at home, not understanding the present system of teaching, could ask, orally, questions concerning the principal points of the day's lessons and let the child write the answers on a paper to be submitted to the teacher next day. Thus combining oral and written study; doubly impressing the salient topics of the past work. I say past work because in confin-

no previous impressions have been formulated. MRS. L. I. BONINE." Dr. Edward M. Schaeffer, the microscopical expert who examined the blood stains in Ayers' room, after the murder will today visit the jail and make a measement of Mrs. Bonine's hand. This will be done for the purpose of comparing the results with the mark left by the bloody and on the window sill. That portion of the window sill which was stain blood was sawed out by Dr. Schaeffer for the purpose of examination.
